4 REASONS EVERY RETAILER SHOULD SELL BOOKS

Books on display pull people into the store and keep them there longer.

A book on wine (for example Back Lane Wineries of Sonoma by Tilar Mazzeo) can keep an otherwise bored companion occupied while their friend shops for new cookware. Each minute that someone remains in the store is another minute where the chances of them purchasing increases. Books anchor people in the store!

Books properly cross-merchandised around the store provide a visual context for all the other products that the store sells.

A display of books (for example The English Breakfast by A.A. Gill) gives character to a display. Books help sell other products!

Books keep on selling other products even after they are sold.

A family cookbook (for example Barefoot Contessa at Home by Ina Garten) will continue to inspire the consumer to try new recipes requiring them to return to the store to purchase more kitchen gadgets and supplies. Books keep selling long after they are purchased!

Random House books sell themselves. They pay for their own real estate and are a great profit center for the retailer.

Random House has the hottest authors and books in gourmet world such as: Julia Child, Ina Garta, Rachael Ray, Mario Batali, Tom Colicchio, Marck Bittman, Sara Moulton, Lidida Bastianich, Giada De Laurentiis, Deborah Madison, and Andrea Immer Robinson. We have a book for everyone and every store. NONE of the other lines that these stores carry can sell ALL the other products that the store carries as effectively as BOOKS!
