Four Reasons Every Retailer Should Sell Books

1

Books on display pull people into the store and keep them there longer.

A fun quirky book (for example Advance Your Swagger or Animal House) can keep an otherwise bored companion occupied while their friend shops. Each minute that someone remains in the store is another minute where the chance of them purchasing something increases. Books anchor people in the store!

Books properly cross-merchandised around the store provide a visual context for all the other products that the store is selling.

A title such as Happy Baby, Healthy Mom Pregnancy Journal is perfect to display next to baby gifts while Sweet Pies will look terrific presented along with baking supplies or serving dishes. Books help sell other products!

Books keep on selling even after they are sold.

A cookbook, such as Bobby Flay's Mesa Grill Cookbook or How to Cook a Turkey, will continue to inspire the consumer to try new recipes and techniques requiring them to return to the store to purchase more products. Books keep selling long after they are purchased!

Random House books sell themselves. They pay for their own real estate and are a great profit center for the retailer.

Random House has the hottest authors and books in the world. From Ralph Lauren to How the Grinch Stole Christmas!, we have a book for everyone and every store. NONE of the other lines that these stores carry can sell ALL the other products that the store carries as effectively as BOOKS!

BOOKS SELL!
