Four Reasons Every Retailer Should Sell Books

1

Books on display pull people into the store and keep them there longer.

A fun quirky book (for example What if...? or Send) can keep an otherwise bored companion occupied while their friend shops. Each minute that someone remains in the store is another minute where the chance of them purchasing something increases. Books anchor people in the store!

Books properly cross-merchandised around the store provide a visual context for all the other products that the store is selling.

A title such as The 100 Best Vacations to Enrich Your Life is perfect to display next to luggage or maps while The Backyard Bartender will look terrific presented along with martini glasses or serving trays. Books help sell other products!

Books keep on selling even after they are sold.

A cookbook, such as The Best of Gourmet or Eating The Greek Way, will continue to inspire the consumer to try new recipes and techniques requiring them to return to the store to purchase more products. Books keep selling long after they are purchased!

Random House books sell themselves. They pay for their own real estate and are a great profit center for the retailer.

Random House has the hottest authors and books in the world. From Clotilde Dusoulier's Chocolate and Zucchini to Tuscan Country: A Photographer's Journey, we have a book for everyone and every store. NONE of the other lines that these stores carry can sell ALL the other products that the store carries as effectively as BOOKS!

BOOKS SELL!

Introducing North Atlantic Books

Founded in 1974, North Atlantic Books has been located in Berkeley, California since 1977. Over this period, North Atlantic has become a leading publisher of alternative health, martial arts, and spiritual titles. Their mission is to develop new ideas, nurture practical education, spread timeless wisdom, and help turn destructive energies into positive forces. They have given voice to many new ways of living that mainstream culture has moved towards since the 1960s—ways to transform diet, health, consciousness, spiritual practice, and creativity. Their strengths are homeopathy, somatics (bodywork and psychotherapy), medicine's history and philosophy, and diet and natural foods.

Introducing Culture Smart!

International Travel is often more than a different time zone—it's a different world. In China, it's rude to be late but in France, it's rude to be on time; one should never be unpleasant in Thailand but in Russia, smiling at strangers may be seen as a sign of stupidity (not the ideal first impression). An unintended insult can do more than make you cringe: it can jeopardize a business deal or even your personal safety. Make a genuine effort towards understanding the country, however, and you've just opened up the locals and made your experience infinitely better. There's no need to stick out—travel with Culture Smart! and you travel with a local. 168 pages.
